Governor Wolf: $5 Million Grant Will Assist People Impacted by Opioid Crisis to Find Employment

Grant to partner PA CareerLinks with PA Centers of Excellence, create new app, and more

Harrisburg, PA – Governor Tom Wolf announced today that Pennsylvania has received a nearly $5 million federal grant to provide career services, with a plan to return to work and create a mobile app for individuals impacted by the opioid epidemic, as part of the administration’s comprehensive prevention, rescue and treatment efforts.

“Fighting the opioid crisis, which has had a devastating impact on individuals, families, and communities, continues to be one of my top priorities,” said Governor Tom Wolf. “These funds will help enhance job programs in some of Pennsylvania’s hardest-hit areas, so that people impacted by the opioid crisis can get back to work.”

Pennsylvania was one of six states awarded the National Health Emergency (NHE) Dislocated Worker Demonstration Grant, which will be administered by the Department of Labor & Industry (L&I) to provide job training and employment support through the following Local Workforce Development Boards (LWDBs):

- Central Pennsylvania Workforce Development Corp., which represents Centre, Clinton, Columbia, Lycoming, Mifflin, Montour, Northumberland, Snyder and Union counties, will receive a $1.1 million award.
- Philadelphia Works, Inc., which represents Philadelphia County, will receive a $2 million award.
- Washington Greene County Job Training Agency, Inc., which represents Beaver, Greene, and Washington counties, will receive a $411,400 award.
- Westmoreland/Fayette Workforce Investment Board, which represents Westmoreland and Fayette counties, will receive a nearly $472,600 award.

L&I and the LWDBs will use the funds to:

- Connect PA CareerLink® employment services to PA Centers of Excellence. L&I will work with partners to provide mobile career services outside the PA CareerLink® brick-and-mortar centers. Participants will also be provided with a transferable skills analysis, soft skills curriculum, and targeted training opportunities. Substance use education training will also be available to CareerLink® staff to help them better understand how to work with participants and businesses affected by the opioid epidemic.

- Develop a mobile app to link people to workforce and support resources. L&I was awarded $700,000 to create the “Community Resource Pocket Navigator” app. The app will be an intuitive, user-friendly, “one-stop” directory to guide individuals to the services they need – whether it’s support services once an individual leaves a medical or treatment facility or employment services from a local CareerLink® office. The app will be available in English or Spanish and will include a first point of contact providing phone numbers, websites, and more.
- Increase the number of Certified Recovery Specialists and provide additional training to retain existing specialists. LWDBs will work with education and training providers to recruit, train and place Certified Recovery Specialists to meet local needs. Additional training will be provided to existing Certified Recovery Specialists. These specialists are people who have undergone the treatment and recovery process and offer crucial peer support, which is a component of successful recovery.
- Engage employers in Recovery Friendly Workplace initiatives. LWDBs will engage employers in initiatives that support individuals in recovery in the hopes of increasing workplace productivity and reducing health care costs while creating supportive environments for workers. Participating employers will be willing to hire and work with people in recovery.

“The Wolf Administration is focused on helping individuals who have received treatment for opioid use disorder find employment and return to the workforce,” said L&I Secretary Jerry Oleksiak. “These grant funds will help integrate treatment and employment services, educate and engage employers, and expand related medical and treatment services to provide a comprehensive, coordinated approach to best meet the needs of commonwealth residents impacted by the opioid crisis.”
